The Donkey's Ears

Once, there lived a kind and curious king in a grand palace. One day, a magician came to visit and offered to grant him one wish. The king said, "I wish to hear what my people truly think of me."

The magician waved his wand and said, "Your wish is granted!" But the next morning, when the king looked in his mirror, he gasped. He had grown long, furry donkey ears! He quickly wrapped a big turban around his head to hide them.

Only the royal barber knew the secret. The barber promised to stay silent, but soon his mouth began to itch with the secret he could not tell. So, he ran into the forest, dug a small hole and whispered, "The king has donkey ears!" Then he covered it with soil and hurried away.

Months later, bamboo plants sprouted from that very spot. When the wind blew, the bamboo whispered, "The king has donkey ears! The king has donkey ears!"

The king heard it and laughed. He removed his turban and said, "Yes, I have donkey ears and I am still your king!" The people cheered loudly, proud of their honest and brave ruler.
