Q 1. Read the passage and answer the following questions:

(1x5=5)

Animals are great builders. They use simple materials but employ sound engineering principles. Man has long used suspension bridges made of ropes of steel and concrete which bear loads in tension. The webs of spiders provide the most vivid examples of animal structures built entirely in tension. Spider-web silk is so strong that many species of birds use it to build their nests. Unlike steel, silk stretches to more than twice its original length before breaking.

Beavers are natural engineers. They use tree branches to construct dams. The divided end is pressed into the walls: this makes the dam strong enough to withstand the pressure of water. The dams of the beaver have an angle of 45 degrees on the downstream side. This also helps the dam to resist the pressure of water.

Constructing a very thick wall is uneconomical. Strength could also be provided to a thin wall by providing support or by making the base wide. The nest of the termite Amitermes meridionalis is more than two metres high with a wide base which tapers at the top. This ensures greater resistance to wind forces.
