WHAT A BIRD THOUGHT

Summary of the poem:

The poem 'What A Bird Thought' tells us how a bird perceives its world. When it is in its shell, it perceives the world to be small and round, and made of a pale-blue shell. When it comes out of its shell into its nest, it perceives the world to be made up of straw. When it grows a little and learns to fly, it perceives the world to be made up of leaves. Now that it has grown up and can fly extremely well, it has left its little home, the nest and the tree and flies wherever it wants to. And when it sees the vast blue sky, the bird is unsure what the world is really made up of. Hence, the bird wants to find out from us what the world is really like.

(iii) Which word tells us that the baby bird was warm and comfortable?

Answer: The word "nestled" tells us that the baby bird was warm and comfortable.

(b) *I said the world is made of leaves,
I have been very blind.

(i) Why did the bird think the world was made of leaves?

Answer: The bird thought the world was made of leaves because, upon leaving the nest, it began to explore its environment and noticed all the leaves surrounding it.

(ii) What does the set of words 'I said' mean?

Answer:

- a. flew
- b. shouted
- c. spoke
- d. cried

(iii) Fill in the blanks to complete the sentence.

Answer: The bird felt that it had been very blind because it could not see the leaves from inside the nest.

3. Why did the baby bird think that its first world was small, round and blue?

Answer: The baby bird thought its first world was small, round and blue because its experiences were confined to its immediate surroundings—its little house and the sky overhead. The term "pale blue shell" represents the sky, which appeared to create a sense of safety. This narrow viewpoint made the world seem small and enclosed, as the bird had not yet ventured beyond that familiar environment.

4. Where did the bird go when it fluttered from its straw nest?

Answer: When the bird fluttered from its straw nest, it ventured beyond the to explore its surroundings. This marked the beginning of its journey to discover a larger world, where it realized there was much more to see than just its nest and the tree.

5. What quality did the bird say it had when it flew away?

Answer: The bird said it had the quality of courage when it flew away. This act of leaving its familiar surroundings demonstrates bravery in facing the unknown, as well as a willingness to learn and grow, despite the uncertainty of what lies ahead.

6. Who do you think were the bird's neighbours? Why do you think so? Discuss.

Answer: The bird's neighbours were likely other birds, insects, or small animals living in nearby trees or nests. This is inferred because they shared the same environment and could interact with each other. They also share a limited understanding of the world, as the bird mentions, "I don't know how the world is made, and neither do my neighbors!" This indicates that they, too, may have not yet explored or realized the vastness of their surroundings.

7. Find and list the rhyming words from the poem.

Answer:

well-shell

other-mother

find-blind

labours-neighbours
