psychology explains why we're so attached to our things

Therefore we understand from the above video that, the meaning of a prized possession is simply one thing or even multiple things that you simply couldn't imagine your life without. It is something you value more than others because of an emotional attachment. There's something special about it — even if it's only special to you. It is something you treasure so much that losing it would cause them pain. We all have them or have had them.

What is your most prized possession?

Write a paragraph in 80-100 words about it and why do you treasure it.
